My Hero in History

Everyone has a hero whom he likes very much. He also wants to make himself like his hero. He is the one who comes up with brilliant concepts that change the world and history. Our history is full of great heroes.

Quaid e Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah is my favorite hero in history. He is the founder of Pakistan. He worked a lot to fulfill the dream of Allama Iqbal that no one could do. They had all the qualities of a good hero. We cannot forget how hard he worked for Muslims for their separate homeland. He struggled a lot in his life and never deceived anyone.

Quaid e Azam started the effort from an early age to get a separate homeland. He had to face a variety of troubles as he was never afraid to cope with them. Both the Hindus and the British were terrified of his political skills and personal integrity. He addressed many times in which he asked about the homeland for Muslims where they could live freely according to their own will.

Quaid e Azam worked hard day and night. He did not care for his health. He got sick but he never cared for himself because his mission was to get a separate place for Muslims. At last, Pakistan was founded on August 14, 1947 which is the result of his wise management and continuous efforts. He became the first Governor-General of Pakistan. For so many years, he fought with tuberculosis and lastly died at September 11, 1948.

He will always remain in our hearts.

Callimachus says:

"A good man never dies."

www.ilmkidunya.com